State Expected To Rest Today Case Against Former Official of Home

Special to The Star

UPPER SANDUSKY, July 17—Testimony about missing funds and records belonging to the Reformed Church Home for the Aged here was given this morning as the trial of Troy A. Dahn, 61, of Toledo, former secretary-treasurer of the home, went into its second day.

Dahn is charged with embezzlement and conversion of $19,056.22 of the home's money.

H. F. Far[illegible], state accountant, who was on the stand when court adjourned yesterday afternoon, testified he had checked Dahn's records and had found none for 1932-33 and only partial records for 1931-32.

Tells of Shortage

Mr. Faris said there was a shortage of $17,569.60 in the home's books for the period from July 1, 1930 to March 21, 1935. The shortage has not been accounted for, he said.

Another witness called by the state, Rev. Bruce Jacobs of the Reformed church at Columbus, testified Mr. Dahn had told him the home had approximately $1,900 on deposit at the Security Home and Trust Co. in Toledo but that Rev. Jacobs could find no account there when he checked with the bank. Rev. Jacobs had been appointed on a committee of the Ohio Synod of the Reformed church to investigate the home's affairs.

Charles P. Troup, superintendent of the home for more than nine years, testified that Mr. Dahn also told him the home had about $1,500 on deposit in the Toledo bank. Mr. Troup further said Mr. Dahn promised to send him the money to pay all creditors but that Mr. Dahn had never sent it.

Mr. Troup was asked by the defense to bring his records to court for examination.

Testimony of the disappearance of a $500 check was given by Rev. G. W. Good, pastor of the Upper

ROOSEVELT HEADS TOWARD NOVA SCOTIA

Light Wind Blows Yacht Slowly Away from Shores of Maine

By The Associated Press

ABOARD SCHOONER LIBERTY, IN BAY OF FUNDY, July 17—President Roosevelt aboard the yacht Sewanna coasted along today toward Cape Sable, Nova Scotia, under the impetus of a light breeze almost 24 hours out of Seal Harbor, Maine.

The wind was proving a little indifferent to the fact that the President was on a holiday but all hands including the chief executive appeared to be enjoying to the utmost his most spectacular cruise under canvas since he entered the White House.

There was a moderate sea and fair weather.

During the night the wind failed and the Sewanna rolled heavily as did the Liberty accompanying the presidential yacht, to a ground swell.

A secretary to President Roosevelt sent a message to the convention acknowledging an invitation. The answer, signed by Stephen Early, said: "Your telegram of invitation for the President to address your meeting in Cleveland is acknowledged with thanks. Size of Force Cut to Eight Men as Business Men Consider Continuing Payments

Personnel of the Marion police department was reduced to eight men today with the expiration of an ordinance passed three months ago by city council creating the positions of extra night patrolmen. The positions were created with the understanding that salaries of the extra men, who were to augment the regular night force, were to be paid by contributions of uptown merchants.

A survey of the uptown merchants who have contributed to the fund to determine whether they will continue to [illegible] the extra patrolmen was incomplete today noon. If the survey indicates that the merchants wish to continue the fund it will be necessary for council to reenact a similar ordinance creating the positions before the men can return to the force, Ralph E. "Without the ordinance the extra patrolmen have no authority, and receive no protection under civil service regulations," Solicitor Carhart said. If the two extra men, Homer [illegible] Osman and John S. Underhill, were to continue without

BURGLARY CASE ENDS IN COURT

Sauers, Last of Trio Accused in Robbery Series, Pleads Guilty

SENTENCE IS SUSPENDED

Leniency Granted Because He Turned State's Evidence Helping Convict Others

The final chapter in a series of [illegible] of burglaries which [illegible] Marion and nearby cities last [illegible] was written today when [illegible] Sauers, [illegible] of Marion, one of a trio [illegible] breaking and entering a dwelling.

Judge [illegible] Peschum was [illegible] with the burglary of the [illegible] home on King avenue last Oct. 3.

George Beachum, 23, of Owego Station. His week began a six month term in the county jail for the part he allegedly took in the burglary of the [illegible] home and the third man, Arthur Hall, 31, is serving a term of five to [illegible] years in the Ohio penitentiary to which he was sentenced [illegible] plea but jury found him guilty last winter.

Leniency Explained

Sauers is [illegible] on his behavior [illegible] year of probation. Judge Young told [illegible] lenient with him because he [illegible] turned state's evidence [illegible] helped [illegible] Hall. [illegible] judge pointed [illegible] in jail in Marion [illegible] since his arrest last October. He [illegible] evidence the state [illegible] the man he considers the ringleader of the burglaries (Hall) and [illegible] a plea of guilty [illegible]. "In consideration of the service [illegible] rendered by turning state's evidence I suspend sentence on you," Judge Young said.

The judge added that if Sauers violated his probation by getting into any trouble with authorities he would be sentenced on his plea of guilty. The charge to which Sauers pleaded guilty carries a life imprisonment unless [illegible] recommended to reduce the sentence. Such a recommendation was given by the jury in Hall's case.

Changes Plea

Beachum Wednesday withdrew a plea of not guilty to a burglary charge and substituted a plea of guilty to a grand larceny charge. Judge Young stayed [illegible] sentencing him on the plea provided he serve six months in the county jail. His attorney, George T. [illegible], pointed out that Beachum already has been held in jail since his arrest last October. In not sentencing Peschum on his guilty plea Judge Young told the prisoner he felt the case against him was not as strong as the one

Fire, Part Underground, Spreads in Waldo Area

Special to The Star

WALDO, July 17—Fire, part of it underground, continued to burn today in woods and pasture on three adjoining farms northwest of here despite efforts to extinguish it since it broke out late Tuesday night.

Sparks from a Pennsylvania railroad engine are thought to have started the blaze.

The blaze burned off nine acres of pasture on the Gail Smith farm Tuesday night before it was checked by members of the Waldo fire department.

Flames broke out again Wednesday afternoon on the Smith farm and spread to wooded sections on adjoining farms operated by Wesley Klingel and Vern Denman. Waldo firemen, [illegible] of Waldo section foreman, cornered the fires after about four acres of woods were burned off on the Klingel and Denman farms. A line fence on the Klingel farm also was destroyed.

Again yesterday the fire broke out in the Klingel woods but was checked by Mr. and Mrs. Klingel, who hauled water to the woods to fight the fire. Mrs. Klingel said she believes the fire has followed tree roots into the ground, breaking out again whenever there is a spot where a burning [illegible] is exposed.

PHONE DAMAGE SUIT BEFORE JURY TODAY

Marion Man's Action Against Company for Denial of Service Goes on Trial

A suit for damages brought by M. E. Miller of 384 Forrest street, against the Ohio Associated Telephone Co. was being tried before a jury in common pleas court today.

Mr. Miller seeks judgment for $2,999 for damages allegedly suffered by reason of loss of telephone service and inconvenience in his business because the telephone company, he charges, will not furnish him with a phone at his residence.

The company charges Mr. Miller has refused to pay a back bill of $107.20 for telephone rental and toll service and says that it discontinued service at his residence in September of 1934. Mr. Miller claims the company had agreed to furnish him with free service when he allowed a telephone pole to remain on his property.

The jury was taken to the Miller residence this morning to inspect the property and pole allegedly placed there by the company. The hearing was expected to be concluded late today. Mr. Miller is represented by Fred W. Warner of the law firm of Carhart, Warner & Carhart, and the telephone company has retained the firm of Wilhelm & Robinson.

Although Marion and the state [illegible] temperatures after a week of [illegible] temperatures, the heat wave was blamed for the death of William H. Woodring at his home at 100 Plymouth street shortly before noon today.

Dr. A. N. Maurer, attending physician, said Mr. Woodring's death was due to a sunstroke he suffered Sunday. The stroke was not at first considered serious and Mr. Woodring refused the aid of a doctor until Monday when members of his family found him lying unconscious on a front porch swing. From that time until his death at 11:30 a. m., Mr. Woodring was confined to his home.

He was 64 years old and was born in West Virginia March 20, 1872. He was married 39 years ago to Mrs. Loella Hupp Woodring, a native of Noble county, who survives. Nine children, Mrs. H. D. OFFERS SMALL COUNTIES HELP

Measure Comes While Assembly Is Deadlocked Over Previous Proposal

BASIS OF NEED OPPOSED

New Conferees Named To Seek Agreement on First Bill Okayed by Senate

By The Associated Press

COLUMBUS, [illegible]

New Conferees Named

[illegible] William H. Horner [illegible]

The $3,000,000 bill would provide relief funds from July 1 to Jan. 31, 1937. Rural house members held [illegible] through a coalition to a provision allocating funds on the basis of need.

Representatives of the smaller counties argued that although their relief funds were in good shape they were entitled to a proportional share of any state grant and not be [illegible] on the basis of what they [illegible] need.

Compromise Offered

[illegible] on the basis of population and three-fourths on the basis of relief needs during the first half of 1936. It would provide aid from August through January.

The state relief commission under the [illegible] measure would be empowered to allot funds to counties provided they raised 25 per cent of the funds during August and September and 20 per cent during October, November, December and January.

Both the senate and house will return Monday night to resume deliberation of the relief problem.

A conference committee of both houses recommended the $1,650,000 bill last night but neither body could muster enough votes to pass it immediately.

Senate Approves

Finally the senate, on a challenged [illegible] vote, concurred in the committee report. Rep. John Lloyd, Republican of [illegible], one of the four dissenters, strongly contended 22 votes were needed for acceptance but Lieut. Gov. Harold G. Mosier overruled him.

Soon afterward small county representatives in the house, delivering an ultimatum that they would not go along with any bill providing allocations on a basis of need or discriminating in favor of larger counties, blocked house acceptance.

Ninety votes were imperative to carry acceptance. The vote was 54 yes, 47 no.

Disgusted house leaders who had been hoping for sine die adjournment today, went into a huddle and called a meeting of the rules committee.

Finally Adjourn House

Sleepily—it was now after 1 a. m.—they adjourned the house and ordered a skeleton session for today to appoint a new conference committee to attempt to reconcile the mutually exclusive demands presented.

Senate leaders meanwhile had given up hope of sine die adjournment and called a five-minute recess until Monday.

As for sine die adjournment there were even hints of indefinite postponement.

Not Ready Yet

George N. Peek [illegible] is not ready yet to throw his personal support to Gov. Landon. He says he is satisfied with the Republican position on farm policy and foreign trade. Mr. Peek, first AAA administrator under the new deal, can not be criticized for waiting to be sure of his man this time.

In 1933 he convinced himself that President Roosevelt understood the needs of agriculture. His experience with Mr. Roosevelt, Secretary of Agriculture Wallace, Mordecai Ezekiel, Jerome Frank and many others now are a matter of public record. Mr. Peek learned to his sorrow and surprise that the new deal was more interested in traveling over the country and the whole world in fa[illegible] than in helping farmers for their own sake.

He learned also that there are men in politics who will promise almost anything to make themselves agreeable. He discovered that even sincerity itself isn't an absolute guarantee of results. Presumably when Mr. Roosevelt and Mr. Peek agreed on a farm program the President was sincere. But his sincerity must have been outdistanced by his well known tendency to try the newest thing, which turned out to be a policy of scarcity and tariff leveling.

Mr. Peek as a result found it necessary to break off relations with the new deal. As he puts it, he is in politics for farm relief, not in farm relief for politics. He is willing to align himself with the party and the man who comes closest to his convictions. He may or may not conclude eventually that Gov. Landon is the man. He can not support President Roosevelt, however. Due to Mr. Peek's eminence as an agricultural authority, indorsement of Gov. Landon as a candidate as well as the Republican party's pledges on farm relief and foreign trade would be one of the major developments of the campaign.

On Sleeping Downstairs

Man is a creature of habit. He also is sensitive to high temperatures, particularly when it is time to go to sleep.

On hot nights therefore he resolves to sleep downstairs on a makeshift bed. There results a clash between habit and comfort.

Well along toward morning he concludes he can not sleep well except in bed. Years of comfort have claimed him as a victim.

But he continues to be a heat victim. There goes on in his mind a sleepy struggle. Eventually he rises from the floor, the porch swing or the davenport and stumbles upstairs to bed.

The next night the whole thing is repeated. Eventually, usually at the end of four or five experiences with cramped leg muscles and partially dislocated shoulders, habit claims its creature and he decides to bear the heat for the sake of sleeping where he is accustomed to sleep.

That, we suppose, is what philosophers mean when they talk about adjustment to exceptionally hot weather.

Jeers, Sneers, Cheers

In Ohio and in Pennsylvania this week earnest citizens trying to understand the relief problem came face to face with a part of the problem which usually is kept under cover. They saw what other states have seen before and will see again, the class consciousness which is being encouraged by subversive political agitators.

In both states legislators considering relief legislation were obliged to carry on deliberations under the unfriendly eyes and words of groups of unemployed assembled in the state capitals for the single purpose of threatening reprisals. It does not matter greatly what leaders of these groups called themselves. Their motive was to make [illegible] remind legislators that if they [illegible] there would be grave consequences. In Ohio it is interesting to note that some assemblymen were antagonized sufficiently by what they probably [illegible] communistic demands [illegible] to yield to coercion.

[illegible] Americans are learning that something more than compassion is entailed in a policy of government aid to the needy. Unfortunately straight thinking all too often is made difficult by persons who are interested in relief administration for a special reason of their own, social revolution. They can be trusted to overlook few chances for using the grievances directly connected with relief to remind legislators that they are ready to foment social revolution unless their demands are met.

It is difficult to understand why any attempt should be made to [illegible] the challenge of [illegible] makers. The [illegible] of satisfying them. Regardless of what they say, they are not interested in making relief more [illegible] railroad retirement act passed [illegible] August the year after the first [illegible] by the supreme court, the government appropriated $46,000,000 to pay for the first year's operation of the annuities pension plan, but expected to be repaid by a 7 per cent payroll tax. Half of the tax was to be contributed by employes and half by management.

As with the first act, strong opposition sprang up against the second plan. In one of the resulting suits the District of Columbia supreme court ruled the tax provision of the act unconstitutional but left the way clear for the government to pay annuities from the appropriated money.

Although faced with the probability that no money will flow back to the treasury, the government has gone ahead to start payment of pensions. Already checks have been mailed to 18 retired railroad workers.

Since the burden of payment eventually falls upon them, taxpayers have a right to ask some questions. Why, for instance, in face of the court decision prohibiting the tax which would have replenished the treasury did the government [illegible] to go ahead with this expenditure? Why were the railroad men singled out for this federal benefaction?

Taxpayers probably will receive no answers to such questions. Instead they will wait with interest to see whether additional court decisions expected in the fall will clear the track of confusion. Invalidation of the whole act by the supreme court at least would halt this latest inconsistency in governmental spending habits.

Trial by Fire.

Water flowing from the great lakes through huge aqueducts 50 miles apart ... an elaborate network of pipelines making running water available on every farm where it was needed in Ohio, Pennsylvania, New York, Michigan, Indiana, Illinois, Wisconsin, Minnesota, Iowa and Missouri.

More big water mains running northward from the great lakes to the Arctic circle to maintain a constant supply ... a vast irrigation system covering the middle of the United States ... drouth made forever impossible ... a project which would establish forever the supremacy of engineering over nature.

"A hot weather fantasy." Possibly so. Charles A. Bracher, city commissioner of Dayton, believes it isn't. He advanced the idea during the 1934 drouth and he has submitted it again. It is, he says, the only solution to the [illegible] problem that confronts the states of the middle west and the millions of inhabitants living therein.

Trial by fire always has been an effective way of making men reasonable. Maybe this is going to end in triumph for Mr. Bracher, who admits he hasn't been making much progress. He has chosen the psychological moment. With the water from Baffin bay in prospect, middle western voters naturally would be grateful. Harry Hopkins is the man Mr. Bracher wants to see.

Drouth's Political Effect Measured

May Prove To Be Either an Aid or Handicap to Administration's Vote Prospects

BY DAVID LAWRENCE

It [illegible] that the drouth has stirred [illegible] up [illegible] but not before the [illegible] election [illegible] may go up in [illegible] the old controversy, and [illegible] to whether American [illegible] would have been better off without the restrictive [illegible] AAA policies in which the farmers were paid for what they did not grow.

The [illegible] intelligently [illegible] this [illegible] would have been much worse in the pre-drouth years without government aid. Nevertheless the farmers who have been [illegible] to regulation of agriculture by government are going to be talking and thinking of what might have been if the [illegible] artificial control had not been instituted to keep acreage down.

A classification of drouth states outside of the solid south shows that there are about [illegible] electoral votes in the drouth area, out of which, when the border states of Oklahoma, Missouri, Kentucky and Tennessee are excluded, there is a total of 130 which might be affected one way or the other by the politics of the drouth.

The new deal is well on its toes with reference to political effects and is preparing to rush funds and direct aid of every kind in the hope of gaining political advantage in the states where disaster has overtaken the farmer. This is a power which no other administration has ever enjoyed so extensively. The new dealers, by virtue of the executive's $1,500,000,000 fund which can be used for almost any purpose, do not have to ask congress for authority. In a sense this is defensible, for had there been no emergency fund available, the farmers would have been pleading for an extra session of congress and a federal appropriation while they starved.

It would appear that national administration of emergency problems will become a permanent part of federal policy as they relate to acts of the weather and the elements. Heretofore the Red Cross has been relied upon for relief of stricken families. The depression has altered the principle of governmental aid. This will no doubt mean careful scrutiny in the future to see that public funds are not disbursed for political ends.

Whatever is spent, however, in direct aid in the drouth states may yet bring in enough votes to offset the effect of the argument that the [illegible] policies were wrong, and that had they not been attempted, the weather would have ironed out overproduction. The city voter with the higher cost of living would then argue that the expenditure for curtailed production was not justified [illegible] as much as overproduction is normally handled by the weather man.

The cross currents in the farm area are quite numerous now. The Lemke-Coughlin ticket and now the [illegible] old age pension agitation are calculated to take votes away from the new deal ticket. The biggest nucleus of farmers is probably Republican. If defection due to drouth controversies and third party tickets keeps many votes from being cast for either Mr. Roosevelt or Mr. Landon, the decision [illegible] the [illegible] It is felt that the [illegible] new deal strategy [illegible] when [illegible] may be [illegible] that the full effect of the drouth may be felt in the national campaign.

Men and Affairs Under The Washington Spotlight

BY PAUL MALLON

WASHINGTON, July 17.—The figures show what business is normal [illegible] is not.

The federal reserve board index of industrial production has hovered [illegible] of 100 per cent for the last three months. That is, production has equaled the so-called [illegible] years of 1923-25 for such a long period as a quarter year.

This may seem to be just about perfect to the man in the street, but if he will look into it he will find a great bulk of big industry lagging far behind: building construction at 47 per cent, employment at 86 per cent, car loadings at 70, store sales at 87. As one eminent authority has privately stated: "No recovery has shown more unevenness, lag and disparity among separate industries than the present."

What has happened is the development of boom business in such things as automobiles and [illegible] which covers deficiencies in such things as cement and building materials, but the whole does not represent normal or anything like a satisfactory balanced level.

What Is Normal?

The question troubling economists is what is normal, if anything? To one researching, Col. Leonard P. Ayres of Cleveland, foremost private business economist, has noted that the three years 1923-25 not only were not normal but were not even average for any period previous or since.

The experts on the federal reserve board are unimpressed [illegible] elsewhere in their field. They chose 1923-25 as their base period because they had to have some base and those three years represented an era [illegible] which there was no [illegible] depression or boom.

But if you trail the 100 per cent back to 1899 you will find yourself on a toboggan. Industrial production in 1920 was only 85 per cent of their normal; 1910 only 60 per cent; 1904 only 47 per cent and 1899 only [illegible] per cent. In other words there never was a real normal in this generation.

Col. Ayres Figures It

Col. Ayres has sought to hit a mathematical normal by striking an average back through these last 37 years. He has drawn a straight line through the federal reserve production figures back to 1899 [illegible] where the line should be and figured out [illegible] That is, he has averaged 37 years of business progress to find what volume of industrial production would be normal today. He [illegible] 17.

This would indicate the present 100 per cent production is 2 per cent less than what normally would be expected at this time in view of the average progress of the country in this century, the growth of population, the expanded ability of the people to consume.

Other Factors To Consider

In 1923 the population of the country was 111,537,000. The official estimate for 1935-36 was 127,521,000. A good guess on the mid-year estimate for this year is 128,400,000. Roughly this amounts to an increase of about 13 per cent since 1923.

If you apply this population increase alone to the federal reserve board production figures you will glean an indication that 113 per cent would be normal now instead of 100. But this does not take into consideration the inestimable growth of consumption ability among the people, the fact that they have more automobiles and could use more gas, or that they have radios and electric washing machines and should use more electricity.

When you get into that nebulous field you can reach the conclusion that Ayres is possibly too conservative, that normal industrial production today would mean a federal reserve board index of about 130. It was 1[illegible] in 1929.

Ayres Conclusions

Using only the population growth, Ayres computed the deficiency of some of the current economic factors as follows (he used the April figure of federal reserve board, but the situation was exactly the same in June):

PER CENT BELOW NORMAL
Production	1[illegible]
Employment	25
Pay rolls	31
Department store sales	28
Freight loading	39
Residential building	[illegible]4
All construction	5[illegible]
Export trade	35

Take Your Choice

These estimates are all more or less stabs in the [illegible] in the dark. A generally acceptable figure probably will come out of current thought on the subject. Whether the right figure be 113, 125 or 130, there is no question that 100 no longer means 100 on the business report card and the existing projection is deficient to a deceptive extent.

NEW YORK, July 17.—Thoughts while strolling: Harry Bannister has one of those villain still pur[illegible] mustaches. Like Adolph Menjou. They say Billy Gaxton will be the Lambs' next shepherd. He's one of the five richest actors. George Cohan is No. 1.

For they Look the Same as They Did 10 Years Ago Club: Hedda Hopper. Don't see Tallulah Bankhead around. Erskine Gwynne's dimpled and seraphic expression, the rascal. Not many swing along daintier than Irene Rich. They've muffled Chic Sale for the radio a long time now.

Democratic high brow: John Erskine. Has Vicki Baum done a literary fade-out? That most highly paid industrialist, Thomas Watson. A Seattle letter sticks in my mind: Zonchuk, it said, is a hired Soviet clown. One here who never loses a shade of his heroism: General Pershing. Memory: Art Hickman's "Whispering."

What this country needs is another Kin Hubbard. And what Europe needs is a conscience. The Players is not the same with Oliver Herford gone and Don Marquis not around. If Frank O'Malley were only here to report E. Percy Wall's homecoming. Al Donahue seems so clerky a pet baton wielder of the moment.

What a joy the radio must be to sheep-herders. For my money the least publicized of the song writers: Jimmy McHugh. Luxury phenomenon: Most of the de luxe art galleries have come through the depression. Dawn painting is plumping up Ed Sullivan. Even Louis Sobol has gained an ounce.

The most widely discussed Rialto topic concerns the return of Katharine Hepburn to the legitimate stage next season. Her appearance before the footlights after her screen success several years ago was an epic in fright. She wants to erase that picture. Before one of the most distinguished first night audiences she was as one in a trance, moving about with oyster pallor, quivering voice and tremble of an autumn leaf. She seemed a frightened child in a dream.

Stage fright is not confined to amateurs. Such grand troupers as Mrs. Fiske faced it at every premiere. There was a night in Philadelphia when she had to make a re-entrance so completely lost were her lines. And the late Oscar Figman went up so hopelessly in his part in Chicago one night—"The Prince of Pilsen," as I recall—that he began to ad lib and with such comic and frightened gusto the lines were kept in the play. All full of jitters.

Coney Island freak shows have a brand of patrons they call "feelers." They are usually first time visitors to whom human monstrosities are so repellant they topple to the floor in dead swoon. Guards are there to take care of them. They are removed to a rear room, given a shot of restorative and hustled out the back way. The swoon is sometimes contagious.

Coney's newest attraction this year is Midget Village, a diminutive town with streets, traffic cops, business buildings that house drug stores, restaurants, soft drink stands, souvenir shop and all the commercial artifice that make Coney Coney. Stories of Stage Coaches' Part in Marion's Past Told in History [illegible] meals to prepare for tired passengers. Two signals were blown, the second one to indicate the number of passengers to be served, the first to announce the approach of the coach.

George Retterer, a driver through Marion from Columbus to Sandusky, related many interesting stories which were retold to writers for the American Guide, Federal Writers project.

According to the pioneer driver, the covered bridges along the way were scenes of many episodes of daring. The dark bridges made an excellent hiding place for the bandits who infested the highways, preying upon the stage coaches. Mr. Retterer often told of the day when he approached one of the covered bridges and saw three men lurking in the shadows at the other end. No passengers were in the coach, but the driver began talking in a loud voice and apparently fooled the bandits into believing his coach was carrying a full passenger list, for the men fled and made no attack.

It was Mr. Retterer, according to his descendants who talked with the American Guide writers, who drove the special coach on which Charles Dickens rode when journeying from Columbus to Sandusky in 1842.

In Ohio History

(From the J. H. Galbreath collection of Ohio histories, written for The Associated Press.)

The pretty little town of Willoughby, in Lake county, was originally called Chagrin. The name came from a river on which it lies. The river got its name from a party of early Connecticut Reserve explorers who sought to find the Cuyahoga river and by mistake entered this stream much to their chagrin. The town was soon relieved of the name; the river was not so fortunate.

How did it get the name of Willoughby? Back in Herkimer county, New York, there was a naturalist named Westel Willoughby, whom some of the Reserve settlers knew and liked. At their suggestion his name was given to the town.

Willoughby was settled in 1799 by David Abbott, Peter French, Jacob West, Ebenezer Smith and Elisha Graham.

TOWNSEND AID FOE OF COUGHLIN HOOKUP

his announcement [illegible] political affiliation George D. Higgins of Los Angeles shouted from the floor for recognition to offer a resolution.

"Out of order," Arbuckle told him with a bang of the gavel. "If you have a resolution offer it to the resolutions committee."

Higgins declined to divulge the nature of his resolution until he had taken it up with the committee.

Dr. Townsend worked on plans for a stumping tour with his new allies, Fr. Coughlin, Rev. Smith and William Lemke, in behalf of Lemke's presidential candidacy.

Townsend announced last night that he and the other three would join in public addresses for the new union party ticket. Although details have not been arranged, said the pension chieftain, they expect to visit New York, Chicago, New Orleans, St. Louis, Philadelphia and possibly San Francisco.

Delegates yesterday acclaimed the Townsend-Coughlin-Gerald Smith alliance, adopted a resolution reaffirming their nonpartisanship and almost as loudly cheered Gomer Smith's speech attacking Coughlin and Rev. Gerald L. K. Smith, self-styled heir to Huey Long's share-the-wealth following.

"He raised a controversial issue in our peaceful convention," said Townsend at a press conference after the Oklahoman lectured on the convention floor that his name alike from Louisiana has tried to sell the Townsend movement down the river.

"The non-partisan resolution and the Townsendite are not a political party but the greatest educational and humanitarian movement on the face of God's earth and to that end we want the field clear for the election of our congressional and senatorial candidates."

Dr. Townsend said he would demand Gomer Smith's resignation before the board of directors.

The members adjourned without taking any action and officially explained that they were unable to locate Gomer Smith by telephone. Showers Help Some Regions

By The Associated Press

CHICAGO, July 17. Showers and cooler weather will bring relief tonight and tomorrow to the northern part of the drouth and heat cursed north central states but elsewhere in the area continued aridity and blistering heat will prevail, Government Meteorologist J. E. Lloyd predicted today.

The showers, light to medium and local in nature, were forecast for North Dakota, northern Minnesota, extreme northern Wisconsin and the western part of upper Michigan.

No rain and a continuance of heat around the 100 mark was predicted for South Dakota, Nebraska, Kansas, southern Minnesota, Iowa, Missouri, Illinois (except in extreme southern portion), Indiana and southern Wisconsin.

Oklahoma also was scheduled to remain in the grip of extreme heat.

Heat deaths, although reduced in rate by more moderate temperatures in the hardest hit states of Minnesota, Michigan, Wisconsin and Illinois, neared 4,100 in the nation.

At Des Moines, Iowa, Junior Meteorologist [illegible] Decker said reports indicated heat and [illegible] reduced that state's probable [illegible] a bushel an acre each day.

Crop damage in Missouri directly was figured at $100,000,000 in a city bulletin.

Purdue university [illegible] drouth had damaged Indiana's corn crop alone to the extent of $1,000,000 and that the oats yield would be only one half of normal.

Blight-drown fields were apparent throughout Nebraska. The menace of grasshoppers prompted many farmers to lay by drouth stricken fields for forage.

Laud King's Behavior

The behavior of King Edward was lauded by residents of London who declared the monarch acted in the tradition of kings during and after the disturbance.

Coolly the king resumed his ride to the place.

Shortly afterward he went to St. James's place for luncheon. Then he rode to his country home in Fort Belvedere where he enjoyed a game of golf — winning from his opponents.

In the evening the king returned to St. James for transaction of business affairs and the usual state audiences.

on the side of the automobile that was turned upward.

Dr. Frederick G. Smith ran back to the clinic and obtained a fire extinguisher which he used while his father and William Devine aided Mr. Dee. Their efforts were slowed by the difficulty of opening the crumpled doors of Mr. Dee's car. Their first efforts to turn the car back on its wheels were unsuccessful.

Treated at Clinic

Mr. Dee was taken to the clinic and his head injuries bandaged. He was taken to his home two hours later.

His automobile, a sedan, was virtually demolished. The right side of the body was crumpled and the motor, which ran with the throttle wide open while the car was on its side, was ruined.

Mr. Dee, a former resident of Bucyrus, said this morning he did not know there had been an accident until he regained consciousness afterward. He said he had looked west on Church street before entering the intersection and that he directed his eyes eastward on Mt. Vernon as he drove on. "I must have been looking away from the approaching car when the collision occurred because I didn't know there had been a wreck until afterward," he said.

Heavy damage was caused to Worden's automobile, a sedan. The front of the car was flattened by the impact.

Mr. Dee was driving south on Vine street, returning from a business trip to Mansfield, and had just started across the five points intersection of Church and Vine streets and Mt. Vernon avenue when the collision occurred.

Mr. Worden was driving eastward on Church street taking Miss Woodruff to her home after they had spent an evening at the home of friends in Marion. Mr. Worden is employed by the Standard Oil Co.

The traffic light at the intersection was not operating. It is turned off nightly about 10:30.

Miss Woodruff was taken to the City hospital in the W. C. Boyd ambulance and was attended by Dr. A. A. Starner. Both automobiles were removed to the Haberman Chevrolet Co. garage.

The latter three testified as to bills owed their companies by the home and that Mr. Dahn, [illegible] Jacobs and Mr. [illegible] conferred with them about the bills promising to pay them if they were reduced.

The bills were reduced but still are unpaid, they said.

The state was to call one more witness this afternoon, then defense witnesses were expected to testify.

Dealings with Mr. Dahn were described by other witnesses yesterday afternoon. They are Miles W. Dippery of Maumee, trustee for a portion of the Amelia Snyder estate with which the home is connected, and John Ketteman, an employe of the Security Home and Trust Co. of Toledo.

Mr. Dippery said no money from the estate had been turned over to him since he was appointed trustee in 1934.

A loan to the home of $[illegible]000 was [illegible] by Mr. Ketteman, who said it had been reduced by small payments made by Mr. Dahn. The interest was paid in full in 1932, he said, adding that a total of $21,000 in bonds was withdrawn by Mr. Dahn while the bank was being liquidated.

M'CARL TO DISCUSS ISSUES WITH LANDON

Recently Retired Comptroller Criticizes Spending Under New Deal Regime

By The Associated Press

TOPEKA, Kan., July 17.—Gov. Alf M. Landon assigned himself an early start on a busy day today, beginning by receiving a delegation at [illegible]:30 a. m. and continuing with others well through the heat of the afternoon.

The expected visitor included J. R. McCarl, recently retired comptroller general.

Upon retiring McCarl criticized government spending under the new deal. This was considered a probable topic of his conference with Landon, who has called for "better housekeeping" in federal government.

Despite a crowded schedule of visitors, Gov. Landon expected to do some work on the acceptance speech he will deliver from the south steps of the state house next Thursday night.

Eugene Meyer, Washington publisher and former governor of the federal reserve board, conferred with Landon yesterday and predicted a very close fight in the coming election. He declined to say whether he would support Landon.

"The outlook at present is not for an overwhelming majority for either candidate," Meyer said.

NEW BILL FURTHER SNARLS OHIO RELIEF

[illegible] fifteen different counties [illegible] for the conception in the [illegible] appropriation [illegible] needs for the last six months of this year and the first month of next. An additional $1,[illegible] was available in present relief commission funds. The [illegible] relief commission life would be extended to April 1.

Want Liquor Funds

A provision which drew prompt protest from Old Age Pension Director H. J. Berrodin and Rep. W. H. Whetro, Democrat of Lawrence county, to ear[illegible] $2,600,000 from liquor profits and taxes earmarked for old age pensions was eliminated.

Twenty-five per cent of the appropriation would be allocated to counties by the commission to make up their needs after they had received maximum allowance under the formula.

Seventy-five per cent would be allocated, one-third on a population basis and two-thirds on a basis of total relief costs for the first six months of 1935.

The requirement of deductions from county allotments for utility excise tax funds in their possession was eliminated.

Finally, the controversial question of administrative costs was compromised at an eight per cent limit.

Both houses disposed of several minor items on their calendars.

The house passed 75 to 10 and the senate concurred in its amendment a bill by Sen. Yoder providing for compulsory publication of delinquent tax lists as an aid to collection of delinquent taxes. The house amendment required county treasurers to mail out tax bills, which is now optional.

Reconsidering, the house passed the Ward bond refunder bill 77 to 16 after defeating it Wednesday night. The senate promptly passed it on to the governor.

Reconsidering again the house passed and sent to the governor Sen. Yoder's bill authorizing the state to acquire the Dayton home of the late Negro poet Paul Laurence Dunbar for a state memorial.

Concurring in house amendment the senate sent to the governor bills by Sen. Metcalf to appropriate $3,000 for teacher training at Ohio university in Athens and by Sen. William Fox, Democrat of Mercer county, to permit establishment of federal fish hatcheries in Ohio.

$50,000 For Use Tax

To the governor also went a house bill appropriating $50,000 to finance administration of the use tax. To the house with senate approval went a bill by Fox and Yoder to compensate firemen injured in service.

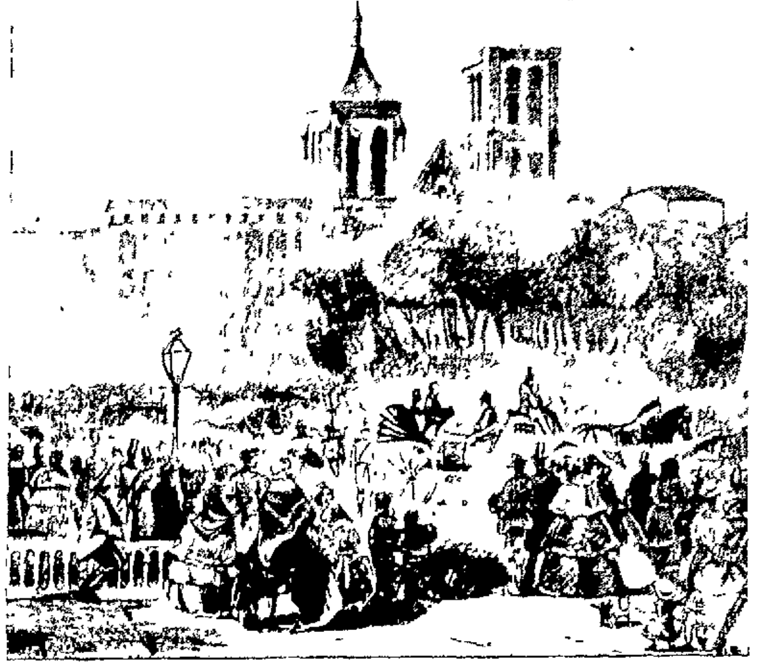
"Populists" and "Know Nothings" Chief Third Parties of Nineteenth Century



Millard Fillmore, an ex-President, attempting a comeback as a Know Nothing in 1856, received Maryland's eight electoral votes.

An ovation to Millard Fillmore, Know Nothing candidate for President in 1856, in New York City's Union square, was pictured thus from a sketch by our own artist, in Frank Leslie's Illustrated Newspaper of July 12 of that year.

This is the first of a series of articles on third party movements in American history.

BY HERBERT FLEMMER

Washington, July 17.—Numerous political movements sprang up during the 19th century to plague the old line parties, but only two assumed proportions of a major threat.

They were the Know Nothing and the Populists.

The American party, organized in 1852 under the official title of The Supreme Order of the Star Spangled Banner, originally was a secret organization. The popular name of Know Nothings arose from the fact its members disclaimed any knowledge concerning the organization.

Its primary object was to secure the [illegible] of [illegible] those whom the party considered genuine Americans. The [illegible] that Americans should rule America won thousands to its fold. Major plank in the Know Nothing platform was extension of the period for naturalization of aliens to 21 years.

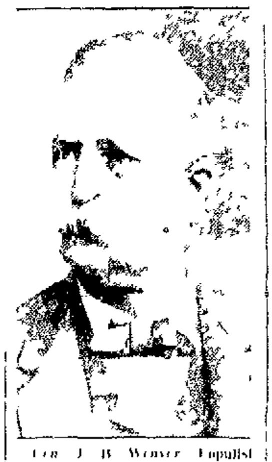
The Know Nothings soon became powerful, carrying various state elections and electing several representatives to congress.

For the presidential campaign of 1856 the party nominated Millard Fillmore and A. J. Donelson.

Comeback Falls Short

Fillmore was an ex-president at the time. He had been elected vice president in 1848 as a Whig and succeeded to the presidency in 1850 with the death of President Zachary Taylor, serving until 1853.

His attempted comeback in 1856 as Know Nothing standard bearer failed. Although the ticket received a popular vote of 8[illegible] it gath[illegible]



Gen. J. B. Weaver, Populist candidate in 1892, won more than a million popular votes but only 22 in the electoral college.

TIRES—not just for Sale, but for PROTECTION

"THOSE two on the rear are beginning to wear pretty smooth," says the LINCO man. Immediately come visions of him hurriedly jacking up the car, tearing off the old rubber, replacing it with new and presenting a bill for two new LINCO tires.

Have no fear. It just isn't done or thought of at LINCO stations. The LINCO man does not make his living from selling tires. He has those tires there for your convenience. When he induces you to replace a badly worn one with a brand-new LINCO, he's rendering you a protective service.

He may be saving you from a blowout ten miles farther along—delay, inconvenience, unnecessary expense and even danger to life and limb. Let the LINCO man look at your tires. He'll be honest with you about them.

LINCO TIRES
Thousands of motorists are enjoying care free and long mileage with LINCO tires scientifically built of the best. The LINCO man has a size to fit your car.

LINCO TIRE REPAIR
The LINCO man carries economical tire repair kits for your convenience or will arrange to have a flat tire quickly repaired while you wait.

LINCO tires, tire care and repair are more of the conveniences available at LINCO stations.

in 1927, but the sentence was later reversed. Seven years earlier, Mrs. Sabella Nitti was sentenced to hang for the slaying of her husband, but she, too, won a reversal.

The method of capital punishment in Illinois was changed from hanging to electrocution July 1, 1927, after the Gassler conviction.

Sits in Chair

Matron Mary Kennedy said the condemned woman sat on a chair in her cell for a moment, leaning her head back, then paced nervously for a few minutes but later regained her composure.

The henna-haired widow's defense insisted that her husband, Joseph W. Bolton, jr., an insurance broker, had caused her grief by 14 years of philandering. Bolton had a divorce suit pending.

Bolton was shot down in his Loop offices June 15 during a quarrel with his wife, which the state charged was only a long series of arguments.

ABOUT ANYTHING

* * * * * *

IN AND AROUND MARION

Youthful Stroller

He wanted a bit of exercise and by the Old Harry he took it.

He's the very small son of one of Marion's attorneys and the other day he disappeared from home. The family was frantic and when the child didn't come home for hours a [illegible] search was instituted. He was found way out in the east section of the city, strolling along apparently oblivious of the fact that his absence from home for so long was creating such a disturbance. That night, when his happy mother put the little fellow to bed she asked him just why he'd run away from home.

She nearly dropped in a faint when he tipped off a few words which included mention of the [illegible] and [illegible] just wanted to take a walk.

He Was Shocked

Another small boy in Marion, perhaps a bit older than the hiker mentioned above, but still of kindergarten age, [illegible] down to his favorite [illegible] the other day when she entertained the family with a bit of dancing, wearing a cute extremely [illegible] let dress that set off her curly hair and her dimpled charms to a degree that enchanted the older folks.

The boy who had agreed to speak a piece at [illegible] would dance [illegible] refused to appear on the same program with her until she took off the [illegible].

That [illegible] was all he could say. He was [illegible] with rage and his [illegible] rose higher when his mother and grandmother tried to find out why he objected [illegible] pretty little [illegible] dancing dress.

"Well," he [illegible] "it may be all right, but she doesn't hang down far enough."

MURDER TONIGHT

BY LAURENCE W. MEYNELL

[illegible] murder [illegible] Burdett's [illegible] [illegible]

[illegible] wasn't much good [illegible] being a Nyeton, seemingly; the [illegible] were out just the same.

"How do you know that?" White asked quickly and Alice could have bitten the end of her [illegible] tongue off. She ought to have learned by now, she reflected, to be doubly careful with a man as madly jealous as her husband.

"I just heard somebody talking about it somewhere in the village. There, have this damned [illegible] sort, Jimmy, [illegible] blessed shepherd pie before it gets cold."

She cut him a piece of bread and put the bottle of Yorkshire [illegible] within reach and filled his glass with water. All these ministrations he received with that masculine matter of course indifference which not infrequently a woman finds the most maddening thing in the whole world. One or two sharp comments came to her tongue but she repressed them. Jimmy had a regular job with good money and a pension; she wasn't going to be fool enough to fall out with him unnecessarily, especially when she could pull the wool over his eyes so beautifully as long as she was careful.

"Pie's burnt a bit," he said. "What are you doing this afternoon?"

"Going to Morechester."

"The pictures, I suppose?"

"Well, what's wrong with the pictures?"

"You're always off there nowadays," he said.

"A woman wants to get out of her house sometime, I suppose."

"What's on—anything special?"

[illegible] Alice [illegible] [illegible] spoiled [illegible] ness of the [illegible] [illegible] smiled her [illegible] and asked again [illegible] [illegible] anything special.

"Good [illegible] thing to do [illegible] inspector [illegible]"

Alice was [illegible] the [illegible]

"Who [illegible] idea? I [illegible] looking chap [illegible] a day or two ago."

"I wonder who he were. Nobody else saw than [illegible]."

"Of course [illegible] saw him but nobody saw anything of a tramp."

"Seems to me a waste of time looking in the village here."

"P'haps they [illegible] out [illegible] go along," White said with a peculiar smile.

"Do you think [illegible] young Shipley?"

"Why should he?" her husband looked up sharply.

"Well, everybody knows he didn't like the old man and I suppose it might as well be him as anybody else."

White looked away again and shook his head.

"I don't think it was Dale Shipley," he said. "So don't you go jumping to the conclusion it was."

Alice gave her rich carefree laugh. "I don't care who it wa[illegible]

At half past two exactly Harry [illegible] on the [illegible] of a fallen [illegible] Nyeton Wood, and his gun care[illegible] on the dry ground and [illegible] pulling an old pouch out of the capacious side pocket he [illegible] the pipe that he had been [illegible].

He glanced at his watch. Alice was ten minutes late but Small didn't worry. She'd come, having trouble with the husband of hers [illegible]. The gamekeeper stirred as his thoughts ran on James White [illegible] a powerful [illegible] seem to [illegible] a man [illegible] had to allow him that.

I'd [illegible] afraid of [illegible] Harry Small's [illegible] broad red; after all, what [illegible] a bit of [illegible] to give [illegible] to it, and Alice was worth [illegible] more than [illegible] his big body [illegible] and so [illegible] phenomenon [illegible] gave him only a [illegible] she came up to [illegible]

"Harry."

"You've come, my dear."

"I am [illegible] an awful pull [illegible] back."

"You're late."

"[illegible] You ought to be damned glad I've come at all."

[illegible] over her flushed [illegible] face and her generous body.

"So I am," [illegible] allowed.

"I told him I was going to the pictures and [illegible] I thought he was going to offer to come with me."

"He can't. Wh[illegible]"

"He does [illegible]"

[illegible]

She sat down on the log beside him, still breathing quickly. He made to [illegible] caress her; there was [illegible]

"[illegible] day," he said.

"[illegible] off on this business at the Court. Who [illegible] Harry?"

"That chap as lives with him [illegible]."

"Lumsdale?"

"Yes. Unless it's one of the gentry whose woman he played about with."

Alice White looked up quickly. "What do you mean?" she asked. "What do you know about it?"

"I [illegible] say as I know anything exactly, but I've heard a tale or two. [illegible] was a bit of an [illegible] wasn't he for all this [illegible] and [illegible] business."

The woman was [illegible] down the ride. "Did you see [illegible] Monday night?" she asked suddenly.

"See him? No, of course I didn't. What's more important to me is did he see the Ruckley gang this was out."

"But if he had been out he would have seen them, wouldn't he?"

"Nyeton Wood's a big place my [illegible]

Sergeant White also takes to the woods tomorrow.

Now Dicky Wants to Help in Loan to Brixton

I KNEW THAT Dicky was at the end of his rope as far as objections to my plan for lending Samuel Brixton money was concerned when in answer to my statement that I had the legal right to dispose of any part or all of the money Robert Savarin had left to me to hold in trust for Lillian and Marion he had said darkly that there were lunacy commissions.

It was the last stand of an exasperated man who had no more artillery heavy or light to bring up. But that he would continue to fight my plan as long as he was able to muster breath to utter his objections I knew very well and I resolved to bring up a piece of heavy artillery of my own and put it into action.

"Dicky," I said quietly, "are you going to penalize me for being honest with you?"

Purposely, I knew, he affected to misunderstand me and take refuge in nonsense albeit savagely uttered flippancy.

Dicky Misunderstands

"Penalize you?" he repeated. "I didn't say anything about prisons. A nice quiet padded cell in a private madhouse is about your gait. I'll appropriate some of the fifteen thousand old Savarin left for your charities to pay for your keep. Charity begins at home, says I."

"I wish you would stop this nonsense and listen to me," I said plaintively.

"Good heavens, woman," he exclaimed, "have I been doing anything else for the last hour?"

I repressed the retort that I could have said all I had to say in very short order had it not been for his frequent interruptions, and he went on:

"But nobody shall say that I ever oppressed the lame, the halt, the blind and the weak minded," he said. "Spoon your fenilla. I'll listen as patiently as I can."

I turned and faced him determinedly.

"Don't you realize that I did not need to tell you anything about this?" I said. "You never would have found out about it if I had kept silent."

He did not speak for a long half minute. Then he said slowly:

"Yes, I realize that. But I also realize that if I had kept a secret like that from you the shrieks could be heard a mile away."

Quarrel Ends

"Provided I found out about it," I said smiling, for something in his voice told me that the worst of the storm had passed over, and that I could soon shut my umbrella and put it away.

"Touche," he said with a reluctant grin, and then launched his last offensive.

"Look here," he said. "I take back all I've said that might offend you, and if Robert Savarin wanted to insure the future of Marion and Lillian he couldn't have chosen a person more devoted to their interests. I'd have said before you voiced this scheme of yours that he couldn't have chosen a wiser one. But honestly now, do you think any disinterested person would think you were playing fair in risking that money entrusted to you by aiding Samuel Brixton?"

I'm not risking ten thousand of the money he planned for Lillian and Marion [illegible] that's only a small part of the whole," I said [illegible]. "The other fifteen thousand Robert Savarin expected me to use as I pleased for my own charities."

"Well, I suppose [illegible] Brixton [illegible]," he said.

"That's [illegible]," I said, flushing. "[illegible] I didn't mean that."

"[illegible]," he retorted. "But [illegible] What [illegible] keep from using that ten? Why [illegible]"

"Because it would be the wisest way," I said. "I heard Mr. Brixton explain what he did [illegible] from I could help him. And I think I could salvage things if I only had [illegible]"

Offers to Help

"Well," Dicky admitted grudgingly, "if that's the sum he named that's the sum he needs. He knows his business [illegible] general financial stringency [illegible] because he isn't a capable citizen, because he is. But see here, I'll [illegible] up ten thousand from [illegible] where the Lord knows where—it'll wipe me out and some more people [illegible] if you won't take the money left in trust for Lillian and Marion."

I turned to him and put my hand affectionately upon his arm.

"If that isn't just like you," I said. "I love you for it, and Dicky, in your present mood I can tell you why I'm sure Robert Savarin [illegible]
